SPECIAL NOTE: It is expected that all CCAP/Middle College students enrolling in Columbia College courses have the maturity to function effectively on a college campus. No special arrangements for additional supervision of underage students are available. College courses are designed for adult students. In a very small number of disciplines, course content may be unusually frank in order to deal with scholarly discussion of behavioral, artistic, human, or other issues. Unlike public schools, colleges do not contact parents in advance to inform them of these matters. Parents are hereby notified that it is their responsibility to ensure that their child is able to handle the college environment, as well as the content of the course in which he/she enrolls. Although CCAP/Middle College students may be minors, they are entitled to all of the privacy rights of a college student. Therefore, any information regarding attendance, grades, behavior, etc., cannot be shared with the parent or legal guardian. Student account information including attendance and grades can be accessed through connectColumbia.
