Programs of Study (Areas of Interest)

Programs of Study (Areas of Interest)

Columbia College's instructional areas are grouped together under Programs of Study. Students often know their basic area of interest, such as health care or emergency services or science or working with young children, but are not clear on which specific degree or certificate is right for them within each area. Students should visit the College's Programs of Study webpage where they can easily navigate through related options to find the one that is right for them. Each Program of Study includes a Launchpad – a suggested collection of courses for their first semester to get started while they continue to fine-tune their specific degree or certificate pathway.
